

TALKED AT SCIENCE MEETING

Doctor Ravenel Addressed Pan-American Congress at Washington.

Dr. M. P. Ravenel has returned from Washington, D. C., where he read a paper on "Present Views in Respect to Modes and Periods of Infection in Tuberculosis," before the Second Pan-American Scientific Congress.

While in Washington, Doctor Ravenel also lectured to the student officers of the Public Health Service on "Sources of Infection and Age Period of Infection of Tuberculosis."

Doctor Ravenel is a member of the advisory board of the United States Hygienic Laboratory. This board, headed by Surgeon-General Rupert Blue, consists of Dr. Victor Vaughn, University of Michigan; Prof. W. T. Sedgwick, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Prof. W. H. Welsh, Johns Hopkins University; Prof. Simon Flexner, Rockefeller Foundation; Major E. H. Whitmore, U. S. A.; Dr. A. Melvin, Department of Agriculture; Prof. E. R. Stitt, U. S. N., and Doctor Ravenel.

This year the board gave special attention to the eradication of typhoid fever, the cure of pellagra and the measures of rural sanitation.

Farmers' Week Notes

W. R. Washburn, a rural teacher from Lewis County, is attending Farmers' Week. He says it is the best gathering he has ever attended.

E. C. Uhlund of Breckenridge is a visitor. Mr. Uhlund says he is attending Farmers' Week to learn about orcharding and the marketing of fruit.

F. E. Longmire, county adviser of Knox County, is here to attend Farmers' Week and also a meeting of the county agents, which will be held next week. Mr. Longmire is a graduate of the College of Agriculture. He took his master's degree last year at the Iowa Agricultural College.

A. E. Talbot of Kansas City is attending the Farmers' Short Course. Mr. Talbot is now deputy dairy inspector for the health board of Kansas City. He took his work for a master's degree here last year.

J. E. Wolfram of California, Mo., arrived last night. He is interested in general farming. "I certainly expect to come next year, too," he said.

Rufus Jackson, editor of the Mexico Intelligencer, is in Columbia for Farmers' Week.

Rufus Brown and Sam Rollins of Centralia are visitors to Farmers' Week. Mr. Brown says that they, like all the other farmers, are here "to learn all that's going."

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Newton of California are attending Farmers' Week.

J. W. Bell, a farmer living near Rocheport, is one of the visitors who come early and stay through the week. Mr. Bell is a breeder of Aberdeen cattle and Poland-China hogs, and Mrs. Bell specializes in Bronze turkeys and Barred Plymouth Rocks. A unique feature of their farm is a park and pool in which they raise fish, tame enough to eat out of the hand.

The editor of the Missouri Ruralist, John F. Case of Kansas City, says that Missourians are getting over the old "show me" spirit and want to learn how to show others. For that purpose they are in Columbia to get first-hand information from the College of Agriculture. Mr. Case said he had discovered, in traveling throughout the state in the interest of his paper, that the feeling toward the University is growing better everywhere.

Mrs. Mabel Miller of Osceola, Mo., who won the gold medal on corn at the San Francisco Exposition, is a Farmers' Week visitor.

Mrs. Harry Sneed, president of the Home Makers' Conference, was unable to be here this afternoon to address the conference, owing to an accident.

M. C. Bruce, principal of the negro institution, Bartlett Agricultural College at Dalton, Mo., is attending Farmers' Week. His corn exhibit won the prize for the largest acre yield.

W. H. Lynch, visitor for the State Normal School at Springfield, is a Farmers' Week visitor. Mr. Lynch is a graduate of the University, A. B. '68, A. M. '72.

A journey of 450 miles and a week's time lost from his business interests is the price one visitor is paying that he may be present at the lectures during Farmers' Week.

He is A. Miller Hammett, a wealthy stock man of Tulsa, Okla. Although he is a graduate of Yale and is widely read in agricultural subjects, he asserts that the benefits to be derived from Farmers' Week are of inestimable value to him in attending to his extensive cattle interests in the South and West.

Miss Ella Yankee of Lone Jack, vice-president of the Home Makers' Club at Lone Jack, is attending Farmers' Week with a view to gaining information in regard to introducing home economics into rural schools.

Mrs. Thomas D. Eble of Hickman Mills, Jackson County, president of the Home Makers' Club at Hickman Mills, is here for the same purpose.

Misses Lizzie and Frances Miller of Higbee, who are attending Farmers' Week, own and manage a 250-acre farm. They carry on mixed farming, being particularly interested in pure-bred poultry.

Mrs. Fannie Klineck, who is attending Farmers' Week, owns and operates an experimental farm at Clarksville, Ia. Mrs. Klineck experiments in flower seeds and grains. She started experimenting six years ago by sowing seeds in her garden. Her first exhibit at the Iowa State Fair consisted of a trunk full of seeds, the result of her first season's work.

"The home people made fun of my trunk full of seeds," said Mrs. Klineck, "but they won me $80."

Now Mrs. Klineck has a 160-acre farm. She is also interested in handicraft, including basketry and needlework. Her aim is to help beautify the world by giving away flower seeds and teaching girls how to make pretty handwork.

PRUNE YOUNG TREES, HE SAYS

Prof. W. W. Lawrence Urges Proper Shaping for Production of Fruit.

"Proper pruning of the young fruit tree is the most profitable and important operation that can be practiced by the fruit-grower," said Prof. W. W. Lawrence in a discussion on "Shaping the Young Fruit Tree" yesterday afternoon.

Money and labor are saved by having a low-headed tree that can be easily picked and sprayed, according to Mr. Lawrence. The shape of the tree for life is determined by early pruning, and a well-balanced top that will admit sun to ripen the fruit and allow good air drainage is one of the most desirable attributes a fruit tree can have.

Pruning of the roots is also an important part of the business of tree-shaping. Best results are obtained by cutting off the ends of the roots, leaving them rather long and making sure that they are in contact with moist earth when set in the ground.

"Buy your trees as close to home as possible, so that you can personally supervise their selection and handling before planting," was Professor Lawrence's advice.

Severe pruning the first few years will yield largest profit in the end, according to Professor Lawrence, as the trees will not require so much pruning later and will have more vigor to use in the production of fruit.

Nearly a Government Case.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5.—An order of dismissal has been filed in the case of a cigar manufacturer of Jersey City, N. J., who through his attorney, Joseph P. Tumulty, sued the William G. McAduff Tunnel Company for damages before Vice-Chancellor Garrison. After McAduff became Secretary of the Treasury, Garrison Secretary of War and Tumulty secretary to the President, the case was settled.
